WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Fairly nice day is expected today as a warm front lifts out to the north. However, a potent cold front will bring rain and strong winds to northwest California overnight and into Saturday. This will be followed by post frontal showers and a threat of thunderstorms. Conditions will improve on Sunday.

San Francisco Weather:

Mostly sunny conditions are expected today aside from some morning fog and low cloudiness near the coast and in the North Bay valleys. However, increasing rain chances will then rapidly spread in from the northwest later tonight and Saturday morning as a stronger and wetter Pacific weather system moves into Northern and Central California. Residual showers are expected to taper off Saturday evening with dry weather returning Sunday and continuing into at least the first half of next week.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

A stalled cold front will keep a chance of light rain over the northern mountains overnight. Dry and warming conditions are expected on Friday as a ridge of high pressure builds overhead. Stronger weather system will move into Northern California through the weekend bringing rain cooler temperatures and gusty winds.

Hanford Weather:

Weak high pressure aloft will produce mostly clear skies and a slight warming trend today. A weather disturbance will bring increasing clouds along with a cooling trend and windy conditions over the higher elevations by the weekend. High pressure will build inland by the middle of next week bringing a return to warmer temperatures.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Another warm and dry day is expected today. On Saturday, the remnants of a weak front will bring much cooler conditions and the chance of some light rain over the Central Coast. Cool conditions will continue on Sunday then offshore flow will develop the first half of next week bringing warmer temperatures.

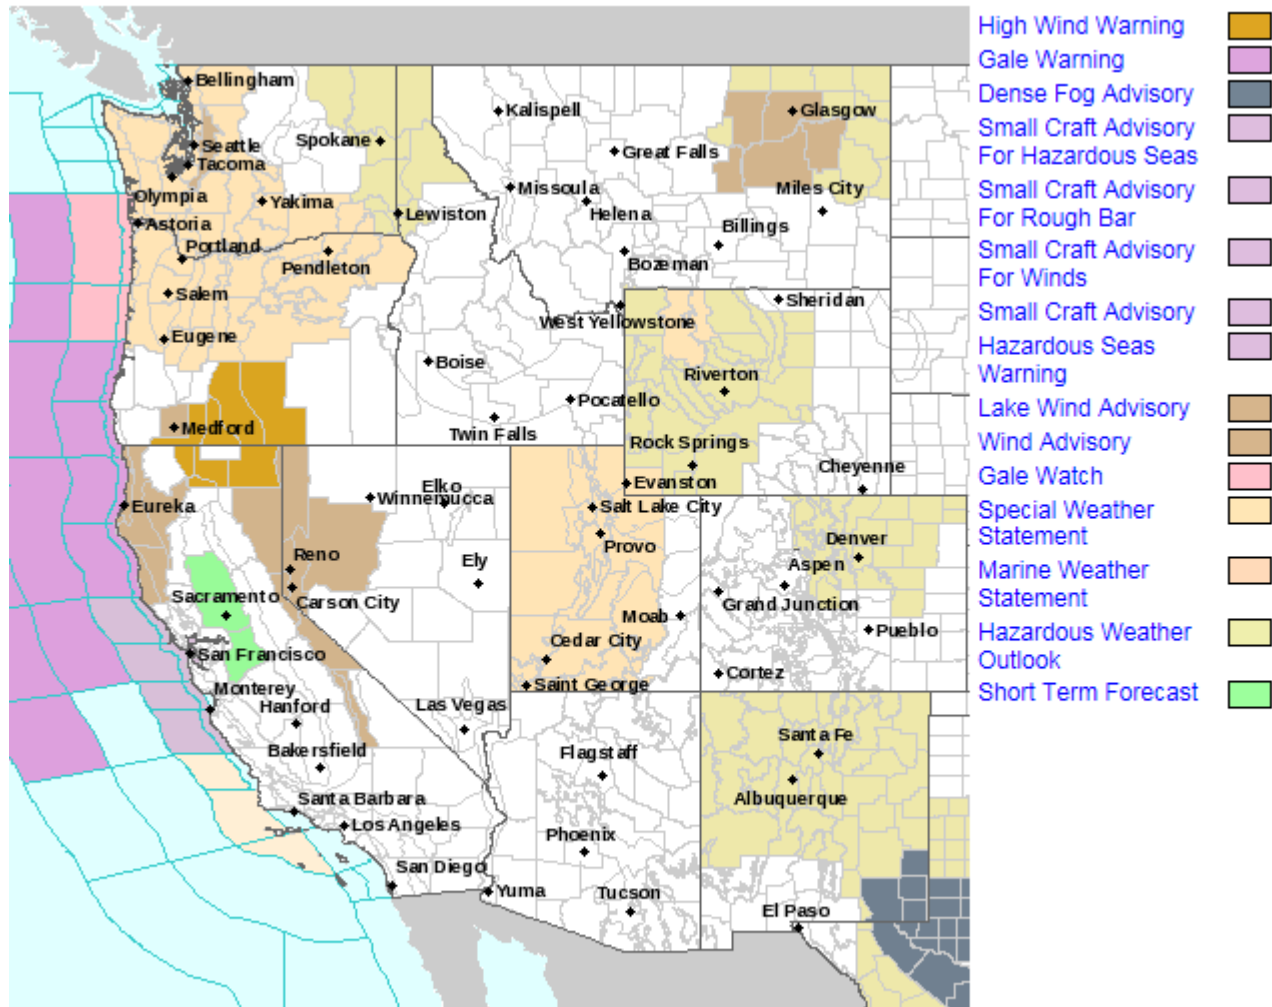

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

High pressure aloft will bring one more warm weather day today. For Saturday, it will be cooler with low clouds and fog extending into the coast as a high pressure ridge shifts east. A trough of low pressure moving through on Sunday will increase westerly winds and may deepen the marine layer enough for patchy drizzle west of the mountains. It will be much cooler and breezy on Sunday then gradually warming up through Wednesday as an upper level ridge rebuilds.

Southeast California Weather:

High pressure today and increasing southwest flow Saturday will result in unseasonably warm temperatures continuing. A trough approaching from the west will bring increasing winds Saturday followed by cooler conditions Sunday and early next week. Temperatures will warm to slightly above normal by the middle of next week.
